

Faculty Review of Open eTextbooks

The California Open Educational Resources Council has designed and implemented a faculty review process of the free and open etextbooks showcased within the California Open Online Library for Education (www.cool4ed.org). Faculty from the California Community Colleges, the California State University, and the University of California were invited to review the selected free and open etextbooks using a rubric. Faculty received a stipend for their efforts and funding was provided by the State of California, the William and Flora Hewlett Foundation, and the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation.

Please provide comments on any aspect of the subject matter of this textbook:

- This book is riddled with typos and misspellings. It is meant for British students and offers examples of film, television, music and radio with very little set up for digital culture.
- It is laughably ahistorical and provincial.
- Its illustrations and visual presentations are awful.
- That said, it might be useful as one of many texts in an introductory course to cultural and media studies because it doesn't get cultural and critical theory wrong -- it just does not provide an analysis that American students would find compelling.
